We Really Do Want To Return Your Full Deposit

Your security deposit is not our money, and we really want to return it to you when you move out. However, by law we must withhold "reasonable amounts for unpaid rent and other charges to return the residence to a rentable condition, wear and tear excepted," on behalf of the owner. If your residence is not returned in the same condition as when you first rented it, the following charges will be deducted from your security deposit. Note: These charges are averages. Actual charges may be higher or lower. Replacement charges may include materials, labor, and removal where applicable. This list is provided for you when you first move-in so you can be aware of the cost of damaged property and hopefully avoid these expenses and do what is necessary to get all of your deposit back.
